San Quentin Gets A New Kind of Felon

By Staff Correspondent

PETALUMA — A judge noted Friday that a man named John-son may be the only man ever to serve time in a state penitentiary for operating his car with-out a driver's license.

That was just part of the confusion when Sonoma County Jail inmates were sent to San Quentin after Thursday's riot.

When William Kit Carson arrived at San Quentin with 180 other Jail inmates Thursday night he was greeted by a guard who knew him with the question:

What the hell you here for!

Before he could answer, a Sonoma County deputy who was in charge of the prisoners answered: shooting buffalo out of season.

William Kit Carson was ordered freed yesterday. The charge against him wasn't very serious — Judge Alexander McMahan told him he gets in trouble when he gets in a car — and the remainder of his sentence was suspended. He told the court he didn't know how long he had to serve. He was placed on probation for one year.

Mr. Carson was one of four men brought to Municipal Court for appearances from San Quentin yesterday. Three were ordered released and the others were released because their jail time was all but up.

Neither the court, the district attorney, nor the deputy public defender said why Johnson was ordered freed.

defender had copies of complaints, charges nor full names of prisoners.

Woman Hijacks Airliner

had convinced her it was Munich airport, she handed over her gun to the captain and was led down the gangway by police officers.

The officers took her to police headquarters for questioning. A police spokesman said later the woman would be transferred to a mental home.

Mansueto said the woman demanded to fly to Germany to "protest her sister's confinement in a mental institution."

Officials in Rome said her sister, Gesuina, 41, had been in and out of mental hospitals since the early 1960s. Gesuina made headlines in 1961 when she staged a stubborn protest on top of the Colosseum to demand a disability pension.

Bertoni, 27, shivering in the cold and windy night on the tarmac, said, "About 15 to 20 minutes after takeoff the woman pulled a gun. I think it was a Beretta 6.35, and ordered all the passengers to move to the front of the cabin."

None of the crew was present because the hostesses were preparing drinks in the kitchen," he said. When one of the hostesses, Anna Sada, returned to the cabin, she was ordered by the woman to sit in front and the woman took her gun at her."

He said the woman told Miss Sada "don't come close, tell the captain to fly to Germany. I have a bomb in my handbag."

The hostess reported to the cockpit and the first reaction from the captain was "no jokes tonight," Bertoni said.

"Once we knew what was going on we asked her where she wanted to land in Germany and proposed Munich. She accepted."

Bertoni said the captain tried to convince the woman to permit him to land in Milan. He said running out of fuel, but Mrs. Lazzeri rejected the proposal.

After seizing the plane, the women told the captain her bag was filled with hand grenades.

ITT Study Costs U.S. Only $242

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government paid $242 for a report that persuaded the Justice Department to settle out of court the largest antitrust case in history—involving corporations worth more than $1 billion.

The Commerce Department in a statement filed with the Senate Judiciary Committee Friday said Richard Ramsden, a Wall Street economic consultant, spent two working days on the report and received $242 for the services.

Ramsden's report was a key factor in the antitrust division's decision last July 31 to drop its suit against the merger of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. and the Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

The Judiciary Committee is investigating that decision to determine if it had any relationship with a reported $400,000 offer by ITT to underwrite the Republican National Convention. The administration has denied any connection and Attorney General John Mitchell took part in the defended the ITT-Hartford settlement Friday as "one of the great chapters in antitrust history."

The settling of the antitrust suit was linked to the underwriting of the Republican convention by a memo published by columnist Jack Anderson and attributed to Mrs. Dita D. Beard, an ITT lobbyist.

In Denver, where she is undergoing treatment for a heart condition, Mrs. Beard denied ITT made the alleged deal with the Justice Department. She also denied that former Attorney General John ITT suit settlement, and also called the Senate committee hearings "an absurd exaggerated by personal ambition and extreme opportunism by a few people."

Woman Agent Tells Her Story

"I didn't need instructions on what a prostitute is," Mrs. Worthington said. "Why, anybody in this courtroom knows what prostitution is."

Mr. Neuer asked her to define a prostitute.

"There are many kinds of prostitutes," she said. "Some women sell their bodies to men and some women prostitute themselves by getting married just for a soft life."

Mrs. Worthington said the only instructions the sheriff gave her was to "go into the river area and find out what we could and to keep an open mind."

Photos

Before she and Mrs. Sanders went off on their assignment, they were shown photos of known prostitutes and told to "keep our eyes open," she said.

At one point in the early part of their investigation, she said, they were shown photos of Mr. Brick, his wife, Sandra Brick, and the third defendant, Robert E. Lee, owner of Bob's Gas House in Guerneville.

The two of them frequented several bars, saw nothing they considered suspicious and finally zeroed in on Bob's when "a man" told them that was the place to go.

She denied that anyone in the sheriff's office instructed them to go to Bob's.

"This was the consequence of the investigation," she said.

The only live action they got into, she said, was the night of June 26 when they met two men at Bob's, took them to Dino's on the Rio Nido Strip, but dropped them after about an hour.

Later, when they were back at Bob's, she said, the two men showed up unexpectedly and Mrs. Sanders', thinking fast, dropped a $50 bill on the bar for a couple of drinks.

Mrs. Worthington said she remarked to the men, "Oh, are your back for seconds?"

The men she said looked somewhat shocked and with hurt expressions on their faces, turned and walked out.

That episode, she insisted, a m. Tuesday.

was all part of an act to convince Mr. Lee and Mr. Brick that they knew how to conduct business.

In the nine hours over four days she and Mrs. Sanders were with Mr. Brick, Mr. Brick conducted himself in a "gentlemanly-like manner" and never made any passes at her, Mrs. Worthington said.

However, she said, Mr. Lee developed a personal interest in her and asked her to meet him after closing time on June 26th.

She said she told him she would, but at closing time she broke the date when Mr. Brick invited her and Mrs. Sanders over to his house for coffee to discuss their plans.

Mr. Lee, she said, became upset and refused to join them at Mr. Brick's home until Mr. Brick called him and talked him into going over.

'Girls Hang Around'

Mrs. Worthington said Mr. Lee never solicited her nor spoke of any compensation. Nor did he ever mention any of his alleged involvement with prostitutes, except to say, "Girls hang around here this bar."

Asked how she became familiar with the vernacular of prostitutes, Mrs. Worthington said she learned it from books and from Mrs. Sanders.

Did she know how Mrs. Sanders became versed in the terminology?

Mrs. Sanders, she said, worked with women in the Council of Churches rehabilitation center in Santa Clara County.

"And her husband is a merchant seaman," she said.

Mrs. Worthington said she had no particular motivation for taking on the vice investigation. "We're ordinary housewives," she said.

The trial was recessed until 10

3 Counties OK 'Pooling' Of Russian River Water

Value, Use

The key to the whole thing, of course, is the similarity of assessed value and water use. In the long run, the "pooling" concept could also ease the financial burden to the Sonoma agency for Warm Springs Dam, according to Mr. Miller.

So far, Sonoma is the only county to sign a contract with the Army Corps of Engineers for repayment of a share of the cost of the dam. When the agency starts using the water, it will have to pay for it.

But under the pooling arrangement, all the agencies contributing to the repayment of the dam, when the agency starts using the water, it will pool using the water and not a single agency.

About 20 government officials attended the Friday meeting which endorsed the pooling concept. They included Sonoma directors for formal action.

County Supervisors Ignazio Vella and Henry Spotorno, four directors of the Mendocino District, three directors of the North Marin District and three members of the Redwood Valley Water District, which will be getting Russian River water from the Mendocino unit.

In addition, Ken Woodward, chief of the Water Rights Division of the State Water Resources Board, endorsed the project and indicated the state probably would issue water rights permits along the Russian River without any problems.

All officials agreed that if another agency wished to use the water in the future — such as the Marin Municipal Water District—San Rafael and Atlanta, said the precinct directed to draft a legal document for the "pool" and forward it to the various boards of directors.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, Iowa, kicked off the Michigan campaign of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, the acknowledged front-runner for the Democratic nomination.

Sen. Robert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who lost to President Nixon in 1968, was endorsed by Sheldon S. Cohen, former commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service.

In Florida, where the primary was expected to be an easy victory for Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama among the Democrats, Humphrey urged Nixon to intervene during his Moscow trip in May in behalf of Soviet Jewry and to work out an "ethnic cultural exchange" between the U.S. and Soviets.

The Hunt For Girl's Killer

Senior Class spirit leader. She also served as "big sister" to Robin Wilkey, daughter of James Wilkey of Santa Rosa.

Rubin described Kim as "The most unique person I've ever known. We spent a lot of time together during my freshman year and it still bothered me a year after graduation that she knew me so well and I didn't know exactly how she thought about things.

"But her values were easily seen and she took great interest in teaching me the things that meant the most to her. She was a hard person to come close to, but her great enthusiasm for the things she was interested in was something that I will always admire.

"She hadn't changed at all when we only three weeks ago and she acted the very same way, only a little more interested and a little more enthusiastic yet still distant."

Annalee Shannon, Kim's sister, mentioned that only the day before she and Kim had talked about death and Kim had mentioned how pitiful an event she wanted it to be — a beautiful ending for a beautiful life.

Prior to Saturday's liturgy at Ursuline, Sister Mary Xavier Dolphee, Ursuline principal, said: "Kim was such a happy person always. The Eucharistic Celebration our girls are planning must have joy as its theme. This has been a difficult day for all of us, but we are so grateful that the family came to go to arrange the memorial."

Kim was born in Oakland.

She was survived by her mother, Roberta Allen, Oakland, and her brother, Robert Stevens, Oakland.

Eggen & Lance Mortuary has died the funeral and is in charge of local arrangements.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The jury deliberating the case of 13 Vietnam veterans charged with trespassing at the South Vietnamese consulate has been given the weekend off.

Grape Growers Meet in SR

Some 400 members of the California North Coast Grape Growers Association conferred about problems of the booming wine-grape industry and took a look at some machinery yesterday at El Rancho Tropicana.

Morning sessions were given over to discussions to labor problems created by Caesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee.

Title of the session moderated by Charles Barra, Mendocino County grower, was Chavez, the Wine Boycott and the 1972 Harvest.

Mr. Barra said CNCGG supports the National Labor Relations Board in efforts to include farm labor under the National Labor Relations Act.

The law prohibits secondary boycotts, Mr. Barra said, and "growers stand on the principle that farm workers have a right to free elections about what union will represent them, which they're not getting from UFW-OC."

Details of labor contracts were discussed.

After lunch Amand Kasimatis, Bruce Bearden, Curtis Alley and A. C. Goheen discussed organization, potential and vineyard care and of heat-treated grape vines, and Jack Frederickson, vice president of Wells Fargo Bank analyzed the financial future of the industry.

Directors and field representatives reports were given at a closed business meeting.

John Knox, assemblyman from the 11th Assembly District, spoke at the annual banquet about legislation controlling varietal wines, to limit varietal names to those wines composed of at least 75 per cent of the named varietal.

He was introduced by CNCGG president Joseph Rochioli Jr.

Membership in CNCGG is composed of grape growers in Napa, Sonoma, and Mendocino counties.

Dole Raps Democrats On Busing

By United Press International

Democratic candidates roamed Florida on the last weekend before its Tuesday primary; Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole refrained them for failing to pay old campaign debts and charged that they "say one thing and do another" about busing.

In Georgia, delegates to the Democratic National Convention were chosen for the first time in state history by votes of district caucuses, rather than by the governor. Forty delegates and 30 alternates were elected, with the seven alternates to be chosen at a statewide convention within 30 days.

The Georgia delegate selection procedure cited little light on the relative strength of Democratic contenders because most of the 127 delegate candidates ran uncommitted or as a district candidate in Atlanta, said the precinct elections were "like going to the moon in comparison to the old way delegates were chosen.
