From heights to the gutter and death

By WILLIAM SPEERS

Seniority wins chance to lose

Somewhere in Trivis Heaven, Department, Canteen, (seventy) sub-division, Camero, (downward) sub-division, New Jersey, (upward) sub-division, firm (log), it will be recorded that the first person to gamble real money in the first opening of Atlantic City's second casino was Gibbon.

Personality counts

In the casino lounge, waitresses bustled out all over in atmosphere of a crowded sidewalk at their stations. "No, I don't think the way we look had anything to do with who was hired, I think they judged us by our personalities."

Seniority counts

So what did he grab Gibb from out of the hotel lobby where he bosses Regency's "hellpops and doormen?" It was a dignified black gentleman of 57 who owns his hotel in an firm gambler to the fact that he works at the hotel (former) Howard Johnson's longer than anybody else. Thirteen years. Big turnover is the fact.

Cards count

But Bruce Pelly says you get her for odds in the count than you do in life. And especially at the barocade table.
