

The Scene 2
The Arts 3
People 6
Action Line 7
Business 8

The Philadelphia Inquirer
city & region

• Saturday, October 27, 1979

By PAUL TAYLOR

Will Scranton, or won't he?

As Bill Scranton, M. Pennsylvania's 12-year-old incumbent governor, sits on the banks of the Schuylkill River...

Indeed, the reply from Scranton's decision could well track into the Fourth Congressional District in northern Philadelphia...

His drubbers

Govern his drubbers, Scranton would prefer to stay right where he is. "I'm not in anything in Washington, D.C.," he said yesterday...

Even with four strong opponents, they expect Scranton to stick with his decision and take himself out of the Senate race.

His drubbers

Like Scranton, Flaherty would probably prefer to stay in Pennsylvania like Scranton, he leaves himself more an administrator than a legislator...

And a Scranton incumbent would do the same for Republican legislators like Thacher Longstrech...

His drubbers

The would open the door for former Republican State Rep. Alvin Kati to go after Dougherty's Fourth District congressional seat...

His drubbers

The would open the door for former Republican State Rep. Alvin Kati to go after Dougherty's Fourth District congressional seat...

See how they run: For judge, very quietly

By Glenn Langford
Campaign '79
One of the Republicans candidates for Common Pleas Court describes his campaign as low-key and unexciting...

judges are elected for three terms, at a salary of $82,000 on the monthly basis...

and impartial performance of the duties of the office.

Philadelphia YMCA president Richard R. Betts, above him the organization's symbol

Capital Y

New boss has given area YMCA new life

By John P. Cicci
He runs two miles every morning. He can do "them every night."

800 persons annually with 700 employees and 500,000 visitors.

2 get immunity, agree to talk in Reinert case

By Tom Mastandrea and Frederick Conk
The two men were indicted for the murder of a young teacher, Susan Myers...

after substituted for him, began talking with investigators a few weeks ago...

Unions may stop building casinos, hiring rules cited

ATLANTIC CITY — Union officials here threaten to close every casino construction project in Atlantic City if the New Jersey Casino Control Commission bans any use of their workers...

Klenk endorses Leonard in city controller race

By William K. Marin

Former City Controller William G. Klenk, who spent five years in office...

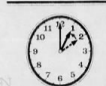

William G. Klenk backs 'the best candidate'

Klenk yesterday confirmed his intention to endorse Leonard and said he planned to make a public announcement at a news conference Monday.

Blacks assail governor on Allen issue

By Tom Hadden

Charges by the annual convention of the Pennsylvania NAACP Pharrangene G. Dick Thornburgh yesterday with angry questions about his investigation of Dr. Fred Alton's attendance record as secretary of the Commonwealth.

Douglass State Term ends at 2 a.m. tomorrow. All clocks set to be turned back one hour.

STUDENTS WHO OPPOSE the University of Pennsylvania's having any investments in South Africa demonstrate yesterday as the board of trustees meets to consider the matter. A trustee committee delayed issuing a report on university policy. Story on Page 2-B.