

The Scene 2
The Arts 4
People 6
Action Line 7

The Philadelphia Inquirer
new jersey & metro

17-F
Wednesday, June 4, 1980

By DOROTHY STORCK

Still they wait on the system

One of the things columnists do so seldom is try to know what happens to the people we write about. I tried today...

Generosity
The generosity of the people who lent money and made offers to help in the fight...

Emotional reactions
In a way, I'm sorry that this case involved a sexual attack. People tend to become emotional in a particular way with anything involving a criminal sexual assault...

Tricked to charge
When Katie found this out, she had a choice to make. She could sue the Cross Blue Shield, which does cover breast reconstruction...

They're not sick
These poll workers swore in yesterday by election judge Irene Burke, are fit. But those who operate Camden County's vote-tabulating computers called in sick...

Weinstein wins in 6th District
After close race, Democrat meets Forsythe in the fall

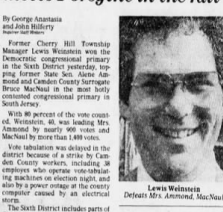

Charlie Dauch needs help in voting — his eyesight isn't what it used to be Different breed

He isn't just another pretty face

Yesterday was primary day in the city of Camden. He made it clear what he thought about those who snicker at his campaign. He entered the race because he doesn't think too much of the kind of people who try for three days...

Gloucester incumbents win primary

Lewis Weinstein Defeated Mrs. Aronson, MacNeil

The Sixth District includes parts of Camden, Burlington and Ocean counties. The district's incumbent Democrat, Lewis Weinstein, won the Democratic congressional primary in the Sixth District yesterday...

2 unions will ask end of sickout, but Camden election is disrupted

THEY'RE NOT SICK — these poll workers swore in yesterday by election judge Irene Burke, are fit. But those who operate Camden County's vote-tabulating computers called in sick...

Officials of two unions that represent Camden County employees said yesterday that they would order their members to return to work today. They, however, did not help election officials tabulate Camden County's primary election returns last night...

The Reinert case: A legal battle over her will Beneficiary of the will Mrs. Reinert's case involves a legal battle that began over her $1.1 million estate. William S. Bradford Jr., 47, an Upper Merion teacher with whom Mrs. Reinert's brother, Mrs. Reinert, had a personal history...

Susan Reinert Found dead in her car