Quick report on coal strike promised by federal board

A miner's equipment hangs idle at a Meigs County, Ohio coal mine.

The board of inquiry began its hearing under heavy security. Several dozen rank-and-file miners appeared for the hearing and one, John Leonard, a local union president from Colerberg, Pa., complained that the board was imposing strict time limitations on testimony.

In his prepared statement, Brennan, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, outlined the industry's view of the underlying issues of the strike and the long negotiation that so far have failed to produce a settlement acceptable to the miners.

Teacher bargaining bill okayed

By HERBERT SPARROW Associated Press Writer FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A measure providing collective bargaining for Kentucky's public school teachers has passed a House committee for Kentucky.

Senators by a Senate committee before it was passed in the Senate. Superintendents and "board members from the state's 18 school districts turned out in force Tuesday to collar legislators and lobby against the measure.

President and Mrs. Carter hosted Yugoslav President Tito, last of the legendary World War II leaders still living, at a White House dinner Tuesday night.

Teachers' bill

By RON CLARK Staff-Newsweek Staff Writer A measure providing collective bargaining for Kentucky's public school teachers apparently would not give Paducah and McCracken County teachers any more negotiating leverage than they already have.

Whitcomb said the proposed legislation would place additional restrictions on the same category as the teachers and also the same category with the bill that it would take the school system "away from the board and the taxpayers."
