Travelogue To Feature West Indies

What we all need at this cold and gloomy time of year is a trip to the warm and sunny Caribbean, and Clint Denn has an instant trip arranged for those who attend the Travelogue at Montross Elementary School Thursday, February 27.

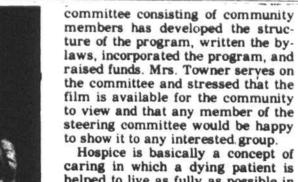

Denn's specialty is the Dutch West Indies and his camera catches the rhythm of life in Aruba, Curacao and Bonaire, three small tropical islands that sparkle like Dutch jewels in the clear blue Carribbean waters.

Driving across Queen Anne's Bridge is like discovering a bridge to Europe because a prim little chunk of Holland is nestled here in a lush tropical setting. The peaceful Dutch buildings and streets give little hint of their turbulent past involving conquests and pirates and Indians.

Our host explores not only the urban charm of Curacao, but also the brilliant coral gardens of Bonaire and the friendly villages and pristine beaches of Aruba (where the only footsteps left for miles around are your own!) His camera searches out lively vacation spots and plush hotels on these islands, then plunges underwater to film exotic marine life and the tropical world beneath the sea.

Denn is a Navy veteran who once served as an aquatic specialist in California and developed a scuba diving training program for Los Angeles County. He also co-authored a book on skin and skuba diving and assisted in the production of two award winning films entitled "Whale Shark" and "Frog Dog." He is a talented man who is equally at home in front of, or behind a camera. He thoroughly researches the land and people that he films and his presentations are lively, informative and stimulating.

This is the third in a series of four Travelogues sponsored each season by the Westmoreland Woman's Club. Tickets are available at the door for $4 and further information may be obtained by telephoning 493-8758.

helped to live as fully as possible in the place he or she desires, whether that be at home or in the hospital. Because the concept stresses life and living, treating all of the patient's symptoms (i.e. pain, depression, nausea, lack of appetite, etc.) is essential to helping the patient enjoy whatever life is left.

In hospice, the family is primarily responsible for the patient's care. The hospice program exists to support and teach the families how to care for their own and to link families with the services that are available in the community, such as home health care, social services, or pastoral care.

Hospice also provides volunteers who are vital in providing for other needs, from sitting with a patient for a few hours while the family goes out, doing shopping, or perhaps helping with financial or estate planning if that is the volunteer's area of expertise. Volunteers also provide much of the manpower for handling the administrative aspects of the programs.

Hospice programs are widespread throughout the state and country and are varied in their structures. Some are run by hospitals, others by volunteers. Usually the program is community-based and is thereby shaped by the community's needs.

The program is worthwhile, Mrs. Towner said, and this community will greatly benefit from a hospice in the area. She said she is encouraged by the community's support so far. Hopefully the Hospice of the Northern Neck will be ready to serve patients within the next year.

The luncheon was well attended by the Rotarians. The customary good fellowship and excellent luncheon were enjoyed by all.

do anything about because of the money. I don't see where we have the money for a complete renovation," John Burton, county administrator, agreed with Newsome. "I don't know where the money would come from," he said. Burton noted a similar survey done in 1977 that called for a $2.5 millionprice tag.

"Maybe it can save us money in the long run," said supervisor William E. Sanford Jr.

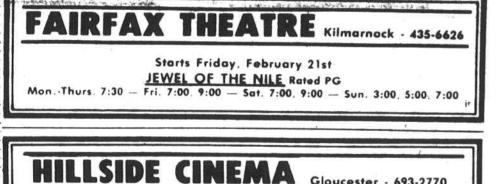

Meanwhile, the supervisofs are in the process of hiring an appraisal firm to handle the upcoming county reassessment. According to Burton, the next reassessment should begin by January of 1987 and be completed by December of the same year. Reassessments must be done every six years on real estate.

The parole violation stems from Lankford's conviction of the attempted rape of Oliva Thorndike. Thorndike was murdered, prior to Lankford's conviction, in Henrico County at an apartment complex. That case, like the Rogers' case, has never been solved.

Local Rotarians Hear About Hospice

The Rotary Club of Kilmarnock-Irvington-White Stone heard Jane Towner of Rappahannock Westminster-Canterbury speak about hospice at their weekly luncheon meeting February 12.

Mrs. Towner is director of resident services at Rappahannock Westminster-Canterbury, and in the past was director of the hospice at St. Mary's Hospital in Richmond. She has also served on the executive committee of the Virginia Hospice cosociation.

Mrs. Towner showed an informative film on the hospice concept called: "Hospice: An Alternative Way to Care for the Dying." The film describes in documentary form the Connecticut Hospice Program.

Mrs. Towner said a hospice program is being started in this area to serve terminally ill patients in Lancaster and Northumberland Counties. The program is in the early planning stages but so far a steering Mrs. John Barnum Christian of Richmond. A May wedding is planned.
