Investigators look to Texas to help find missing Air Force nurse

By The Associated Press

LITTLETON — With no new leads in Colorado, investigators searching for a missing Air Force nurse have asked for help from authorities in Texas.

Nonnie Dotson, 33, an intensive-care nurse at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, was last seen Nov. 19 when she left her 16-month-old daughter in the care of her brother at his home in this Denver suburb.

Authorities in Texas are examining Dotson's computer and talking to Dotson's daughter's father.

"We've received a formal request from the Jefferson County sheriff department to assist them in their investigation of that missing person," Capt. Jim Rickhoff of the Bexar County sheriff's department told the Rocky Mountain News in a story on its Web site Monday.

Dotson went out line dancing at the Grizzly Rose the night before she disappeared and her brother, Tony Dotson, 34, said he received a phone call from a man who said he danced with her there. Tony Dotson said the man told him he helped her dodge two other men who were flirting with her and wanted to take her to breakfast.

She returned to her brother's home in the early hours of Nov. 19 in her brother's car.

"You always wonder, did someone follow her home?" Tony Dotson said.

But Jefferson County spokeswoman Jacki Kelley said investigators have talked with several men Dotson met while out dancing but that none of the interviews yielded any new leads. She said there is no information that points toward foul play.

"There seems to be two camps, that either she had some involvement in her own disappearance, or that potentially something tragic has happened to her. We have no information to support that one theory is more credible, or more likely, than the other. We simply have nothing new, Zero," Kelley said.

When she left her brother's house on Nov. 19, Nonnie Dotson said she planned to go shopping, spend time with friends and possibly have dinner. Her cell phone had been traced to southwest Littleton but had not been found.

Search dogs also picked up her scent in the same area, but it is unclear when that scent was left. Tony Dotson his sister had gotten her hair done near there a day before she vanished.

Sandy May Bailey

Sandy May Bailey, 47, of Fort Collins, passed on Friday, Nov. 24, 2006, at her home. She was born on June 27, 1959, in Fort Collins, to Roy "Merle" and Rhodabelle (Cutshall) Bisley.

BAILEY

Sandy was a compassionate woman who was involved in PFLAG and a member of the "SFO" Secular Franciscan Order. Over the years, Sandy volunteered her time in all of her children's schools and took pride in all of their accomplishments. Sandy was an avid supporter for animal rights and the right to life. She loved music and lived life to the fullest.

Sandy was especially proud about being "Granny" to her three grandsons: Isaac, Jr. (3), and Michael (2) Cordova, and Rylan Mills (1). To her sisters, she will always be our "Little Sis."

Sandy is survived by her parents; her former husband, Steven Cordova; her four children, Isaac (Brandy), Zachary, Ariel (Keith), and Bailey and her sisters, Fay Davis, Victoria (Dave) Cooley, Linda Palmer, Bonnie Vail; and nine nieces and nephews. She is also survived by her best friend and companion, Robert "Bob" Peterman, and her pets, Bitsy, Bo-Bo, Pan, Destiny, and Luna.

Services will be held at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday at Foothills Wesleyan Church, 220 N. Taft Hill Road. Interment will be held at Grandview Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorial donations be made to the Sandy Bailey Memorial Fund in care of Bohlender Funeral Chapel.

Timnath

son said.

Municipalities formally establish GMAs through intergovernmental agreements with the county with the understanding land within designated growth areas will not be annexed by other cities.

One of the purposes of having intergovernmental agreements is to prevent annexation wars and improve land-use planning, said Larry Timm, Larimer County's director of planning.

Through the agreements, development proposals that come to the county within a recognized GMA are held to standards similar to those of the city or town that eventually would take them in, he said.

The county has agreements with Fort Collins, Loveland and Windsor and recognizes their GMAs but does not have agreements with Timnath, Wellington or Johnstown, he said.

County officials are reviewing a draft intergovernmental agreement proposed by Timnath, Timm said, but have yet to see maps detailing its GMA.

"The maps are very important elements to be considered," Timm said.

Timnath Mayor Donna Benson could not be reached for comment. But in earlier interviews, she said Timnath's growth management area has not been respected by other local municipalities.

The city of Fort Collins has bought property within the area with the intention of preserving it as an open space buffer between the communities, although officials say they would grant right of way through the property for roads and other infrastructure improvements.

Timnath has about 230 residents living in approximately 90 homes. In recent years it has annexed more than 2,200 acres of farm land along County Road 5 and Harmony Road and earmarked the land for residential and commercial development.

The town's population is expected to top 10,000 in the next 20 years.

Timnath officials created an urban renewal authority to help finance road improvements and build sewer and storm drainage facilities in anticipation of growth.

Many of those projects are expected to begin in 2007. Town officials expect to issue about 200 building permits for new homes next year.
